Gregory E. Ganssle

Greg graduated from the University of Maryland in 1978. He earned a Masters of Arts in Philosophy from the University of Rhode Island (1990) and a PhD. in Philosophy (1995) from Syracuse University where his dissertation on God’s relation to time won a Syracuse University Dissertation Award.

He has taught philosophy at Syracuse and is currently a part time lecturer in the philosophy department at Yale University. Greg is also an associate director at the Rivendell Institute. The Rivendell Institute combines ministry to Graduate Students and Faculty with Academic Research.

Greg teaches regularly in the Directed Studies program in the Humanities. It is his favorite thing to do! He works on philosophy of religion and the application of philosophy and theology to the practice of learning.

Greg has been married to Jeanie since 1985. They have three children: David, Nick, and Elizabeth.